

An Index of Authors to *A Survey of the Scientific Manuscripts in the Egyptian National Library

Benno van Dalen and David A. King

Key words: scientific manuscripts, catalogue, index, bio-bibliography

Abstract

In 1986, David A. King published an English survey of his Arabic catalogue of the scientific manuscripts in the Egyptian National Library in Cairo, which had appeared in two large volumes in 1981 and 1986. This survey is arranged chronologically by author within a number of geographical regions. Although a list of all authors is found at the beginning of the work, no alphabetical index of authors is included. On the occasion of King's retirement, and with an eye on the recent renewed interest in the bio-bibliography of Islamic scholars, this article presents such an index, generated from a computer database by Benno van Dalen.

“Never Index Your Own Book”, title of Chapter 55 of Cat's Cradle by Kurt Vonnegut, Jr., 1963.

Introduction 1 (King)

During the period 1972–79 I was involved in a project based at the American Research Center in Egypt. The stated goal of the project was to catalogue the 2,500-odd astronomical and mathematical Arabic, Persian and Turkish manuscripts in the Egyptian National Library (Dār al-Kutub al-Miṣriyya) in Cairo. Continuous funding in soft currency (Egyptian pounds) was secured from the Smithsonian Institution's PL480 programme by Prof. Owen Gingerich of Harvard and the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatories.

The first two years of the project, at the end of which I first gained unlimited access to the manuscripts, defined the modus operandi of the next five years, namely, to use Cairo as a base for serious research into the history of Islamic astronomy. Ted Kennedy came for two years, and Jamil Ragep, on an ARCE fellowship, for one year.

I was formally permitted to prepare an Arabic catalogue of the collection, which was to be published in Cairo. This was eventually achieved, and the 2-volume catalogue of over 2000 pages was published by the General Egyptian Book Organization in 1981–86, equipped with indexes of authors, titles, owners and copyists. The very same index cards that had served to prepare the Arabic catalogue were then reshuffled to produce an English survey of the manuscripts to supplement the standard reference sources of Suter, Brockelmann, Renaud, Krause and Sezgin. This work, entitled A Survey of the Scientific Manuscripts in the Egyptian National Library, was published by Eisenbrauns of Winona Lake, Indiana, in 1986 and is still in print. It included 194 pages of technical information concerning close to 750 authors and their works as represented in the Cairo collection, followed by some 110 pages of photos of extracts—illustrations, tables, charts, title-folios, colophons, etc.—from Cairo manuscripts of particular historical interest. The work was arranged chronologically by region (the regions being indicated by letters from A to K as specified in the table of contents on p. vii) and it contained a list of authors at the beginning (pp. 9–22). However, it did not contain an index of authors or titles.

It took close to 30 years to publish the surveys of Islamic tables for astronomical timekeeping and regulating the prayer times that I had compiled in Cairo before serious work on the catalogue could begin. (These are now available as the first two parts of In Synchrony with the Heavens—Studies in Astronomical Timekeeping and Instrumentation in Medieval Islamic Civilization, 2 vols., Leiden: Brill, 2004–05.) So it is surely not too late for Benno van Dalen to present this computer-generated index of the authors in the Cairo Survey. It comes entirely of his own initiative and I have no clear understanding of the means by which he did it.

Introduction 2 (van Dalen)

By the time this issue of Suhayl appears, for me a very pleasant and productive period of work of nearly 20 years at the Institute for History of Science in Frankfurt am Main will have come to an end due to the closure of the institute. During this period the director, David King, frequently expressed his frustration about the missing indexes of his very useful reference work, A Survey of the Scientific Manuscripts in the Egyptian National Library. It therefore seemed appropriate to prepare an index of authors for the Survey on the occasion of his 65th birthday in November 2006 and his subsequent retirement. An additional reason to publish such an index at this time is the renewed interest in the bio-bibliography of scholars in Islamic societies following the recent publication of Mathematicians, Astronomers & Other Scholars of Islamic Civilisation and their works (7th-19th c.) by Boris Rosenfeld and Ekmeleddin İhsanoğlu (with two supplements published in this journal), and the initiation of the Islamic Scientific Manuscripts Initiative (ISMI) Project by Jamil and Sally Ragep (Institute of Islamic Studies at McGill University, Montreal / Max Planck Institute for the History of Science, Berlin).

The index of authors of David King's Cairo Survey as it is presented here has been computer-generated from a database with the names and other basic information on Islamic scholars that I have built up during the last ten years. In this database the elements of the names (laqabs, kunyas, isms, nasab, nisbas, and ʿurfs or maʿrifas (pseudonyms) are entered in separate fields, allowing a quick search for, for example, all persons with the name Muḥammad ibn Aḥmad (there are 44 in my entire database of at present 1700 scholars). Besides, this arrangement has allowed, with the help of a small Pascal program, the quick generation of an index for the Cairo Survey with entries for every part of a name under which one might want to look it up. In this way it becomes easier to also identify authors in cases where only a part of the complete name is given. As an example, in this index Zayn al-Dīn Abū Hurayra ʿAbd al-Raḥmān ibn Banafshā al-Jawharī al-Ṣāliḥī (C87 in the Survey) can be found under Zayn al-Dīn, Abū Hurayra, ʿAbd al-Raḥmān, al-Jawharī, and al-Ṣāliḥī. Furthermore, Aḥmad ibn Yūsuf ibn al-Dāya Kātib al-Ṭūlūn (B40) can be found under Aḥmad, Kātib al-Ṭūlūn, and his pseudonym Ibn al-Dāya.

For the convenience of the reader we have added full bibliographical data for the most important other reference works on Islamic scholars. As an Appendix, a list of corrections to the Cairo Survey is included.

Appendix: Corrections to the Cairo Survey (King)

The following errors have been noted in my own copy of the Cairo Survey. The initial references are to page / entry / reference to Arabic catalogue / line number (negative from bottom of text). In many of the nisbas relating to obscure places, the vowelings is dubious and could be corrected with some effort.

- 26/A18/1.1.6/2: for “Ḥunayn b. Ishāq (no. B20)” read “Ishāq b. Ḥunayn (no. B34)”
 27/A21/5.2.6/-3: for “Hosen” read “Hoesen”
 34/B17/6.2.4: for “al-Sārī” read “al-Sarī”
 34/B19/5.2.9/1: for “K. al-Dwʿr dhmzj (?)” read “K. al-Duwāzdah marj”
 34/B20/1.1.6/1-2: move this entry to B34
 35/B22/5.2.10: see Paul Kunitzsch in ZDMG 134 (1984), p. 284, n. 17
 37/B30/1.1.6/2: for “Ḥunayn b. Ishāq” read “Ishāq b. Ḥunayn”
 40/B45/1.2.3/1: for “yamtaḥanu” read “yumtaḥanu”
 41/B52/1.3.1/17: for “n.d.” read “1969” and see Kunitzsch in ZGAIW 3 (1986), 62f
 53/B109/6.2.25/3: for “Safāʾih” read “Ṣafāʾih”
 55/C4: for “al-Dunya” read “al-Dunyā”. This individual is probably to be identified with the legal scholar Sirāj al-Dīn al-Sajāwandī (no. G11)
 59/C17/4.1.1/-14: for “Sédellot” read “Sédillot”
 60/C25: for “musātāra” read “musātara”
 64/C37/3.1.9/6: for “D152” read “C80”
 66/C46: for “F49” read “F39”
 72/C62/2.3.6g/1: for “fi” read “fī”
 72/C62/2.3.6h/1-2: for “fi” read “fī” and for “muqawwamat” read “muqawwamāt”
 79/C93: perhaps identical with C131
 91/C131: perhaps identical with C93. For “al-Sakhkhāwī” read “al-Sakhāwī”
 101/D16/4.1.10/1: for “taḥsīl” read “taḥṣīl”
 132/E8/4.1.2/8: for “ijazas” read “ijāzas”
 135/F5/4.7.2/3: for “Fez” read “37°”
 135/F7/4.3.30/3: for “TM” read “ṬM”
 136/F12 et passim: for “al-Yasamīn” read “al-Yāsamīn”
 138/F23/2.1.17a/3: for “Escorial 904” read “Escorial 909”
 140/F32: for “al-Hājj” read “al-Ḥājj”

144/F60/3.2.33: read “timekeeping”

146/F74: for “TIs Hyderabad” read “MS Hyderabad”. This work has been studied in detail in Àngel Mestres, Materials andalusins en el Zīj d’Ibn Ishāq al-Tūnisī (unpublished doctoral dissertation), Barcelona 2000, with a summary in Angel Mestres, “Maghribī astronomy in the 13th century: A description of manuscript Hyderabad Andra Pradesh State Library 298”, in From Baghdad to Barcelona. Studies in the Islamic Exact Sciences in Honour of Prof. Juan Vernet (Josep Casulleras and Julio Samsó, eds), Barcelona (Instituto “Millás Vallicrosa” de Historia de la Ciencia Árabe) 1996, vol. 1, pp. 383-443.

148/G10: for “Muḥīy” read “Muḥyī”

148-149/G11: perhaps to be identified with no. C4

151/G21: see George Saliba in Isis 74 (1983), pp. 388–401

162/G76: see L. A. Mayer, Islamic Astrolabists and their Works, Geneva 1956, pp. 78–79 and 87

173/H23/4.1.9/-1: for “Akhrīn” read “Akhwīn”
